Sir,

I wrote previously to you on the subject of the Definition of Marriage which you are choosing to overturn. I quoted to you that which is made clear in both the Hebrew scriptures and the Greek scriptures, by those who, only, may define marriage - those chosen by God, Adam and Christ, to be the head of the first humanity and the head of a new humanity - "A man shall leave his father and mother and cleave to his wife." There is, and can be, no other definition which properly expresses human nature.

I received a letter from your staff thanking me for expressing my "opinion".

Shortly thereafter, the world witnessed two unprecedented cosmic events in the same day. An asteroid, the size of a block of flats, came as close as it is possible to our planet and narrowly missed engaging an orbit with us, or falling to earth in a catastrophic way. And a meteor, the size of a bus, exploded with a force greater than Hiroshima's bomb, injuring over a thousand.

This country has, since then, endured a month of Scandinavian weather due to a temporary shift of climactic streams.

I ask just two questions, Sir.

Firstly, what do you think would be the effect of a permanent shift of the Gulf Stream; what would be the climate of this country; what would the effect be on agriculture, industry, tourism, investment; what would the effect be upon the population; what the effect on trade ?

And secondly, Sir, I ask you - do you not fear God ?
